PAPER DOLL OF 1909 FOUND HIDDEN IN DAILY NEWS FILES

The well dressed paper doll of 24 years ago had a wardrobe of many ornate frouces, according to a full sheet of cut-outs found hidden in dusty, yellowed files of the Moorhead Daily News. The paper doll, dated 1909, according to the inscription at the top of the sheet, was presented in those days to the little girls of Moorhead who came to visit the Howard Moody store, located in what now houses the Leo Johnson store.

Advertising a brand of underwear apparently was the purpose of the sheet of cutouts. The snug warm underthings meant for the paper doll seem to breathe of a day when young ladies dressed more carefully in cold weather.

The very symbol of modesty and propriety is the old fashioned petticoat, with its full ruffled skirt, snug waist, and a colored ribbon drawing it up to a discreet neck line.

The doll herself, a young lady of perhaps 10 years, wears a demure little smile. Her brown hair is piled into a mass of curls held in a bow at the side. One of her dresses is yellow, with a white sash worn low, and trimmed with a high white collar. Another is rose, with white embroidered yoke, and three frilly ruffles from the shoulder to the elbow.

Another frock is gray, trimmed with heavy looking bands of purple, perhaps they were of velvet.

The hats are shallow crowns, with wide brims, not unlike what milady is wearing in 1933. Unusual are the floral decorations on the hats, mammoth roses, daisies, etc. One of the hats is an elaborate white embroidered creation, trimmed with red full blown roses, perhaps meant for an afternoon garden party.

There is a sunshade, very frilly, something like the one Rebecca of Sunnybrook farm prized so highly. A teddy bear, a box of candy, a ball, suitcase and tennis racket, complete the ensemble.
